If it were up to you to decide what projects Hope needs most under the terms of the federal Works Progress Administration (WPA), what would you select? That will be the problem before the City Planning Board, three members of which have already been appointed, and which should be completed this week.

WPA projects probably will be limited to those of a permanent nature. It should be the duty of the City Planning Board to keep worth-while, permanent projects constantly before the public. The absence of city and county planning boards is responsible to a large degree for the failure of the federal expenditures in previous years to produce admirable work. The pathetic "weed-cutters" hired with federal funds in other years are commensurate as to the federal government. Every community should have a planning board, continuing from year to year, regardless of whether emergency federal funds are available, as they happen to be available now.

Unemployment Aid May Continue for Temporary Period

Governor Believes "Purging" Will Be Held Up for the Present

STATE NOT READY

Dyess Holds Up "Purge" Instructions to County Administrators

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Governor F. J. Dyess said Monday he is "confident" that the federal government will continue unemployment relief in Arkansas for the present when assured as to the actual facts.

The governor's statement followed a recent series of public statements in which the governor charged that Arkansas was threatened with immediate withdrawal of this type of relief because he said the Washington authorities had received the impression that the state is ready to take over the relief program immediately.

Prewitt Criticized
While in Hot Springs last week the governor in a formal statement criticized Roy Prewitt, executive secretary of the State Welfare Commission, for announcing that Arkansas was threatened with immediate withdrawal of this type of relief because he said the Washington authorities had received the impression that the state is ready to take over the relief program immediately.

The governor issued a new appeal to federal authorities to continue unemployment relief here.

In a letter to M. J. Miller, PERA field representative, New Orleans, La., he said: "The state stands ready to put every available dollar for relief into use," but reiterated his belief that Arkansas is unable to immediately take over the whole relief task.

"Purging" Delayed
On Sunday W. R. Dyess, state PERA and WPA administrator, held up instructions to county administrators to begin striking off unemployed from the relief rolls.

Floyd Sharp, deputy administrator, said the instructions were "held up" temporarily pending preparations of the state Public Welfare Commission to provide relief for the unemployed.

Welfare Commissioner Roy Prewitt went ahead with "preparations" to spend the $150,000 at his disposal—all the money now available for relief—by instructing his field supervisors to obtain lists of the most destitute cases in each county.

However, Administrator Dyess' delay in issuing the actual order to purge the relief rolls of unemployed gave state officials ground to hope that he may have been convinced the state is unable to carry the load and may consider their pleas for revocation of modification of the order.

The Welfare Department received telegrams from Senator Hattie Cantwell and Congressman D. D. Terry and John Miller, promising an investigation of the unemployment relief situation in Arkansas.

Governor F. J. Dyess returned to his office from a three weeks' vacation in Hot Springs, but his only comment on the situation was:

"Washington has all the facts in the case, and it is up to them."

It now appears there are fewer than 15,000 persons on the direct relief case load. A revised estimate of unemployment as of July places the number at 8,000 instead of 10,000 and Deputy Sharp said there will be fewer than 5,000 dropped under the PWA program for physical disqualifications.

This decrease is due, he explained, to the increasing ability of relatives of unemployed to resume the burden of caring for them.

Mrs. Mary Vance Is Exonerated in the Houser Case

Tells Sheriff Bearden of Trip From California With Very Ill Man

SEARCH FRUITLESS

Failing to Find Him on Train, She Continued to Tuckerman

Sheriff Jim Bearden and Coroner J. H. Weaver announced Monday that questioning of Mrs. Mary Vance of Los Angeles with regard to the death of W. N. Houser, also of Los Angeles, caused them to believe the man died of natural causes.

Mrs. Vance returned to Hope Sunday afternoon from Tuckerman with Sheriff Jim Bearden and Deputy R. O. Robins. She returned to Hope voluntarily and did not refuse to answer any questions of the officers.

"We are thoroughly convinced that she is in no way connected with his death," Sheriff Bearden said. Coroner J. H. Weaver added that he believed her innocent of any connection with Houser's death.

Mrs. Vance told The Star that she last saw Houser just before the Missouri Pacific train they were on pulled into Hope last Wednesday night. She said it was some time later before she missed him.

On discovery that he was gone, Mrs. Vance said she searched throughout the train after failure to find him continued on to Tuckerman.

Mrs. Vance related this story to Sheriff Bearden:

"Mr. Houser was past 60. He had been in ill health for some time. We boarded the same train at Los Angeles with tickets for St. Louis.

"The purpose of the trip was to visit my parents at Tuckerman and then to visit Mr. Houser's mother at Douglas, Kan. Mr. Houser slept scarcely any. At times he talked of abandoning the train and continuing on a bus. He appeared nervous and ill."

Mrs. Vance said that Houser had been employed at the Los Angeles city water works for a number of years, and that his son was a relative of her.

Mrs. Vance said that she first knew of Houser's death when neighbors at Tuckerman reported they saw an account of it in the newspapers.

Harry Lawrence, deputy sheriff at Tuckerman, said that he had known Mrs. Vance all her life and that her reputation and character were good.

To Continue Monday

Mrs. Vance said she would return to Tuckerman Monday, visit her parents a few days longer and would then go to Douglas, Kan., for a few days stay with Mrs. Julia Apple, mother of Houser.

Houser's body remained at Hope Furniture company morgue Monday pending further word from relatives in Kansas.

Officers here have abandoned plans for an autopsy when they received a report from Little Rock that cost of one would be prohibitive.

Houser's body was found last Thursday afternoon along the Missouri Pacific right of way two miles northwest of Hope.

The Martin derrick was dismantled Monday and moved to the new location. Darwin & Moore, oil firm of Camden, will have charge of the drilling.

Hairs Reveal Identity of Their Owners

When you find a suspicious-looking hair on the shoulder of your husband or sweetheart, you can take it to a hair specialist and learn exactly from what person that hair came.

Of course, you would have to go around to all the women you suspect and pluck hairs from their heads for comparison, but with that tell-tale hair matched with the sample hairs, the modern hair specialist can identify the culprit without hesitation.

Such identification would be based on the recognized fact that no two persons have the same type of hair. Police make use of this helpful fact in criminal identification.

Human hair varies greatly on account of the different shades that it may assume, the changes that take place with age, and the different parts of the body from which the hair may happen to have come.

When you look at a hair under the microscope you will find that it has three layers, a central, an inner and an outer layer. The central area of the human hair is narrow and differs from that of the hair of any animal except the chimpanzee and the gorilla, which are apes, very near to man. In the apes the coloring matter of the hair is nearer to the center than it is in man.

In white or gray hair, the pigment cells, or coloring matter, is absent. The hair of the beard, the mustache and other portions of the body has a broader center than the hair of the head.

In white or gray hair, the pigment cells, or coloring matter, is absent. The hair of the beard, the mustache and other portions of the body has a broader center than the hair of the head.

When the medico-legal expert examines hair he tries to answer five questions: Are the hairs human or animal? If from an animal, what animal? If human hair, is it male or female? From what part of the body did the hair come? About how old was the person from whom the hair came?

Not long ago there was a charlatan, with a hair tonic for sale, who advertised that any person whose hair was falling out, if that person would pluck out a few hairs and send them to him, he would tell him whether he was suffering from malnutrition of the hair roots.

We knew those time-payment fur coats had malnutrition of the hair roots. But the horse's tail was in the best of condition.

Of course, the charlatan never examined the hairs under the microscope, or he could have guessed what was being done to him.

A BOOK A DAY

Here's Mark Twain as Others Saw Him.

America has been full of anecdotes about Mark Twain for years. Most of them drift about from person to person and, in the course of time, get lost. We get, at least, a compilation of them in "Mark Twain Wit and Wisdom," edited by Cyril Clemens with a foreword by Stephen Leacock.

Here we find a double handful of Mark Twain stories, contributed by people ranging all the way from Bernard Shaw down to the humorists' former associates on the newspapers of the far west.

Some of them are simple reminiscences of him and others are stories that he used to tell; some of them are very amusing and some of them are pretty pointless; but here they all are, hot or cold, and if you are a Mark Twain fan you'll probably want the book.

On the whole, however, it is just a

Keeping Boy Who Has Outgrown Them in Knickers Only Leads to Snickers

"Suits?" repeated the affable gentleman. "Over to the right, Madam."

Bert followed his mother through a forest of forms clothed in beautiful tweeds and flannels. His eyes skipped the ones with mustaches. What he wanted was to know if boys his age didn't wear long pants. These people in the store would know. His mother said you couldn't trust the taste of people on the street and when you saw a boy of fourteen in slacks it was because his mother didn't know any better.

Anyway, Bert had argued that he was taller than his friends and his legs were too long for any more knickers. Besides, when he tried to get into the Bowler's Club, they had called Spindle Shanks and said he'd better play tiddly-winks. He wanted to go with those older boys sometimes, especially since his old chum Herb was one of them now. But what did women know about it? They wanted to keep a fellow a baby forever.

The clerk looked the boy over. "You'll want slacks this time young fellow I guess," he said.

"You better grin, Bert. He could have cheered 'See?' he nudged his mother. "I told you."

"No," she said firmly. "Yes," she turned to the salesman. "I know all about it. Even little tads wear long trousers and they are quite dressy for boys of all ages. But that is only when they have several suits. My son can have only one at a time. He is too young to put them on for every-day wear. He is only fourteen."

"Once he gets into long trousers he will begin to think he's a man and he will be going with older boys. I want to keep him where he is for awhile. How much are these brown knickerbocker suits?"

Boy and man glanced at each other. The man winked slightly. Or did he? Bert couldn't tell. But his heart rose just the same and he felt that he had an ally here.

The boy was at that period of growth when legs and arms are favored at the expense of the torso. He was still short-waisted, so when he tried on the brown suit and glanced in the mirror at himself, he cringed. The old trousers hadn't made him look so funny, but these balloons with so much cloth hanging miles below his knees, and the bony shank below, reminded him of an inverted lollypop.

Clothes Make Boys a Man

"Gosh, Mom, I can't wear these things. Feel like a roasted turkey. They're terrible."

His mother herself felt something amiss. "Are you sure that's his size?" she studied.

"To get arm-length and shoulder-breadth—yes," he explained over his shoulder. But he was badly selecting a few suits with long pants. "You might try one of these on just to compare the sizes. This one is exactly the same as the other except for the style."

Bert put it on with shaking hands. Then he went forth from the fitting room and stood before his mother. She looked and then smiled, wore in her eyes. "Yes, dear. That's the one. You look wonderful. But I've lost my baby."

There is a time when nature says, "I'd like to be covered." Boys reach the long-trouser stage at different ages, depending on growth. The best thing to do is to study it out and, without sentiment or prejudice, dress them the way they feel best. At the most sensitive age, clothes play a part.

An Advantage

"To what do you attribute your remarkable health?"

"Well," replied the old gentleman, "I reckon I got a good start on most people by being born before germs were discovered. They haven't less to worry about. It's happened."

ENJOYING the moon, Jo?

This time the girl recognized the voice as belonging to Bret Paul. With another stride Bret stepped from the shadows of the path and into the clear moonlight reflecting up from the shimmering lake.

"I was just going to walk along the shore of the lake," Jo told him with a cordial smile. "Want to come along?"

He hesitated the fraction of a moment—long enough for Jo to sense that he had other plans. But he managed at last to say, "I'd like to very much, Jo."

She smiled quizzically. "Perhaps you'd better not, Bret, if you have an appointment."

"I haven't an appointment," he answered stiffly. "Babs said she might take a walk tonight, and I told her I might run into her that's all."

Jo was somehow enjoying his discomfort thoroughly. "Well, if we should meet her there's no reason why we can't make it a three some like, is there? Or do you think three and the moon is a crowd?"

Bret fell into step with her. "Don't start kidding me, Jo. I don't feel like being kidded."

"Oh . . ." she put surprise into her ejaculation. "Then it's that serious?"

"Don't be a fool," he told her roughly. "You know darned well I've never been serious about Babs Montgomery. Only a fellow gets mighty lonesome up here, Jo."

"Felonious? With all this moon?" He nodded. "Oh, it's all right for you. But I don't belong, and I don't want to, really. I'm just the life guard."

"And I'm just the hostess," Jo laughed.

"But you're a girl, and a darned pretty one. You've all the men chasing you, so of course you're not lonely."

"Not all, Bret," objected Jo with a laugh.

When he answered, his voice was touched with faint anger. "Do you want any more? This aviator fellow, and Marsh—and this crazy Fragonet . . ."

"That's not quite true, Bret. I'll admit that Mr. Fragonet has been a little—well, silly. But Todd Barton is just a good friend, and Douglas Marsh is only my employer."

"Does your work include having dinner with him at the Lone Tree Tavern?"

"Bret . . ." Jo put a hand on his arm. "Bret, let's not get started on that again. Besides, you've been listening to the veranda chorus. I'm afraid."

"I haven't been listening to anything," Bret said. "I'm not altogether blind." He turned to her suddenly. "Jo, I don't want to be unpleasant every time we meet. But it hurts me to see you acting like this."

"Hurts you?" repeated Jo, bewildered.

He nodded. "Of course it does. Good Lord, Jo! Do you think I could love you as much as—as I did and not care what you do now?"

"That's true, Bret," admitted Jo slowly. "That's why I don't want our friendship to be spoiled, ever. But somehow we seem to be unable to avoid arguments." She looked out across the lake for a silent moment, then added, "If you could just believe in me, Bret. Why can't you now? You used to believe in me."

"You've changed," he told her quickly. "I don't believe you realize yourself how much you've changed—and that's what makes it hurt all the more."

Jo faced him squarely, and when she spoke again her words were slow, careful, measured. "Perhaps I have changed. Do you really think a girl could be just the same after what happened, Bret?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean I loved you, Bret. I doubt if you ever realized how much, because I don't think any man ever realized how much a woman loves him. He's so wrapped up in himself, so intent with his own love." She stopped, biting her lips. "Bret, I'd have followed you anywhere. I'd have done anything in the world for you. I thought there wasn't any man in the world quite like you."

"But, Jo—"

"PLEASE let me finish," Jo interrupted. "I thought there wasn't any man in the world like

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Use Eye Cosmetics Sparingly

Eye cosmetics should be used sparingly and with a great deal of restraint. Lashes, heavily coated with uneven beads of mascara, stamp a girl as lacking in good taste. But a small amount that doesn't detract from the eyes themselves enhances her personal appearance.

Generally speaking, unless your lashes and brows are quite colorless, you ought to reserve eye makeup for evening when lights are soft. Blue eyeshadow that, under electric light, adds allure to a blonde's skin and hair, may, if she uses it in the daytime, make her features coarse and her complexion sallow.

However, whether or not you need artificial color on your lids during the day constitutes an individual problem. If you decide that you look better with it, pick a shade that makes a subtle shadow and not blatant smudge. Cover the entire lid, but not extend the shadow outward from the corner of your eye.

Purple and brown shades generally look nice on the lids of brunettes, but do try several before you decide. Green or dark blue often are as flattering to certain dark haired types of girls as they are on blondes. And many blondes look lovely with light brown or dark purple on their eyelids.

The new iridescent shades are attractive on nearly everyone. These cast a shadow, of course, but a light, shiny shadow that seems to sparkle and shine and give vivacity to the upper half of the face.

If you have trouble getting eye-lid makeup on smoothly, brush your forefinger across a bit of cleansing cream before you dip it in the eyeshadow.

Lynching Traced

Attorney James Davis blamed "apathy of the Supreme Court of the United States" and other federal tribunals for the mob hanging of Clyde L. Johnson. The search for Robert Miller, accused of participating with Johnson in the fatal shooting of Chief of Police F. R. Dow of Dumas, swung to Weed. A man who, officers said, answered the description of the fugitive held up a grocery store there Saturday night. Officers feared that Miller, if captured, would meet the same fate as Johnson, dragged from the county jail here early Saturday by a masked gang and hanged from a pine tree.

District Attorney Davis said that citizens had been roused to "uncontrollable unrest" because of delay in the legal execution of George Hall, convicted of murdering a state highway patrolman and a citizen here two years ago. Hall, now in Folsom prison under death sentence, resisted the conviction by federal court habeas corpus proceedings which Davis declared had been "slowly manipulated" to the country's highest tribunal.

Davis said that the order allowing the appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States was made April 2, 1934, and was still pending.

Happiness

Happiness is like a crystal,
Fair and exquisite and clear,
Broken in a million pieces,
Scattered far and near;
Now and then along life's pathway,
Lo, some shining fragments fall,
But there are so many pieces,
No one ever finds them all.
You may find a bit of beauty
Or an honest share of wealth,
While another just beside you
Gather honor, love or health;
Vain to choose or grasp induly,
Broken is the perfect ball,
But there are so many pieces,
No one ever finds them all.
Yet, the wise as on they journey,
Treasure every fragment clear;
Fit them as they may together,
Imagine the shattered sphere;
Learning ever to be thankful
Though their share of it be small,
For it has so many pieces,
No one ever finds them all.

Bobbie's many friends will be further interested in the following account of a birthday dinner party recently given in his honor by the House Mothers at the Chi Omega House in Fayetteville. The event celebrated the honoree's ninth birthday anniversary; covers were laid for sixteen, including Mr. and Mrs. Finley Ward and house guests, when Bobbie entered the dining hall, he found a number of beautiful and useful gifts piled in his chair, and following the main course, Norman Nail of St. Louis, Robert's music teacher, came in bearing a beautiful birthday cake, adorned with nine glowing candles, and every one joined in singing "Happy Birthday." Stressing the autumn tints in the church decorations and the bride's corsage, the wedding of Miss Louise Owen, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Owen and Nallon J. Wylie, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Wylie of Emmet was solemnized at the First Baptist church at 4 o'clock, Saturday afternoon. The ring service was read by Rev. Wallace R. Rogers in the presence of relatives and friends. The nuptial music was played by Mrs. B. C. Hyatt, who played "I Love Thee" and "O Promise Me." Preceding the ceremony and during the taking of vows, played "Because." The strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus announced the approach of the bride and groom, who came in unattended. The place of ceremony was marked with a tangle of greenery flanked by two shades of marigolds and ferns. The bride wore a modish brown crepe ensemble with matching accessories, her corsage was of yellow roses. She is a graduate of the Hope High School and is a popular member of Hope Public School faculty. Walter Johnson Resigns as Pilot

Steve O'Neill Succeeds "Big Train" as Manager at Cleveland

CLEVELAND, Ohio. (AP)—Steve O'Neill, coach of the Cleveland Indians, Sunday night was named manager of the team as Walter Johnson resigned.

Johnson will investigate progress being made by players in minor league teams in which the Indians are interested, he said in announcing his resignation.

For years a masterful figure on the mound with the Washington Senators, Johnson said he had suggested his resignation to the owners of the club and that it had been accepted. He praised the ability of O'Neill, the length of whose tenure was not specified.

His announcement came at the end of a conference with Alva Bradley, president of the club, and Billy Evans, the Indians' general manager. The team returned Sunday night from Detroit, where it dropped three games in a row to the Detroit Tigers. The Indians are now in the second division, after challenging the league leaders earlier in the season.

The Indians have been seriously handicapped by injuries and illness, the latest casualty being Bruce Campbell, now in a Detroit hospital with spinal meningitis.

O'Neill, as a catcher, was one of the heroes of the heroes of the Indians in 1912. He caught for 12 years, ending his playing career with short stints in Boston, St. Louis and New York of the American League. O'Neill managed Toronto in 1929, 1930 and 1931, leading the team to one pennant. He became manager of the Toledo team in 1932 and remained there for two years, until his appointment to assist Johnson.

Home Clubs

Green Laseter

The Green Laseter Home Demonstration club met at the home of Mrs. Earl Wolff July 2. Due to the rainy weather we had a very small attendance.

The devotional reading was read by Miss Griffin from the 133rd Psalm. We had two visitors and 11 members present.

The business part of the meeting was attended to, we discussed canning some also.

No demonstration was given as the storm came up and we had a big rain. Everyone got excited and forgot about the club meeting.

Our next meeting will be at Mrs. Marsh. Everybody be there.

Girl Scouts

The Blevins Girl Scouts Lone Troop No. 1, organized in November 1934 with ten members. Since then the membership has increased to 16. A meeting was held July 23 and new officers were elected for the next six months:

Treasurer, Ernestine Houser, scribe, Louise Moore; First Patrol—Leader, Marie Ward; second, Fern Stephens; Second Patrol—Leader, Mary Kata Tedford; Second, June Goodlett.

A few of the girls have earned money for their official uniforms and soon we hope the whole troop will have uniforms.

At the last meeting July 30, a mother's and daughter's chicken barbecue was planned for the night of August 14.

It will be the first time the girls have honored their mothers with a special picnic.

The troop has begun practice on a play to be given in the near future. The money thus earned will be used to buy nature study equipment.

The first six months of our Girl Scout work have inspired us and we hope soon to have many new members and accomplish more during the next year.

Long Uninterested as to F. D.'s Tour

Silent on Report President Will Speak for Senator Robinson

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A blunt "I'm not interested in all that speculation" was the comment of Senator Long, Democrat, Louisiana, Sunday on reports that President Roosevelt's tentative plans to visit Arkansas foretold a major New Deal-Long clash.

Mr. Roosevelt has been represented as planning to stop off in Arkansas and greet Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, who is up for re-election in 1936. Some months ago, Long said he would go into Arkansas to battle Robinson's return.

Sunday, he refused to reiterate that intention.

"I have nothing to say," he replied. Just before he banged down the telephone receiver Long added: "I'm very busy."

As to presidential plans to visit Hot Springs National Park, Long said: "I'm satisfied the people in that section will be glad to see him. They probably will like to know what's happened to all those promises he made."

Quarters close to Mr. Roosevelt said a presidential stop at Hot Springs, Ark., was more likely to include a speech on national parks than on outright political talk. But it was believed the president would use the opportunity to express his friendship for Robinson, who has marshalled a heavy legislative program through the senate.

One Out of Three Couples Childless

Of 23 1-3 Million Couples, 7 1/2 Million Are Without Family

WASHINGTON—(AP)—One out of every three married couples in the United States is classed as "childless" by Census Bureau experts. The last exact count was in 1930 when the percentage of couples without children stood at 31.9. A new study estimates the percentage now has moved higher.

Officials apply this estimate to the so-called "normal" families. If divorced families or families broken by death are included the percentage of childlessness is greater.

In the "normal" group there were 23,352,990 couples in 1930, of which 7,447,328 had no children. Families having one child numbered 5,254,863 or 22.5 per cent; those having 2 children, 4,246,489; three children 2,650,730; four or more, 3,753,610.

City couples had fewer children than rural families. The percentage of childless couples was 34.8 in the city, 31.7 in small towns and 25 on farms.

Childless negro families are reported more numerous than white, Native

Tax Bill Passed

while the projected deficit would exceed that every month.

Nearly all the top "must" bills except the tax and Guffey coal stabilization measures now have been acted by either house or senate. New word to Capitol Hill Sunday was that the president so anxiously wanted the Guffey bill passed that he did not care particularly about its form. Some thought that concession would get the bill out of the house ways and means committee early this week and onto the house floor before the week-end.

Five Bills in Conference
Once the coal plan is out of the way, house leaders said there will be no other bill on which congress must act before it adjourns. They were assuming, of course, that the five big bills now in conference would be expedited.

These include the Tennessee Valley Authority and farm administration amendments; social security, utilities and omnibus banking. Conferees anticipated agreements on all these except the utilities bill. Reports were current that if the utilities conferees could reach no agreement before the rest of the state was clear that bill would be dropped and used as a pro-campaign issue between now and next January's session.

Some leaders were seeking a reach the adjournment stage by August 20. The president has a Midwest speaking date on August 23 that he would like to keep. Many, however, doubted he would be able to do it unless he left congress in session.

There were probabilities that several bills on the fringe of the "must" list might be put through if the session lasted long enough. Among these were railroad reorganization, food and drug amendments, but and truck regulation, limitation on war profits.

white citizens rank next, while foreign born white couples are found the least childless.
